On Installments

A Story from Life

Bill Jones had the automobile u Smith, Brown, and Green, all neigh of Bill, had cars. Bill did not own Smith, Brown or Green could afford or if the cars were paid for, or if they served pay for them. In fact, about this time he saw his friends' cars he was not informed by their headsache or less expensive than any big car income or less expensive than had, and he also knew that he, him had not the ready cash to lay down t ear.

But the urge to have a car of his was very strong. Mrs. Bill Jones o mentioned the subject. She felt a s small deficiency in not being able to appropriate the rides with the Smiths, Browns, and the Joneses were kind c to shover upon her, out of the goodn of their hearts, and she just now f felt sorry for her in knowing so p that she could not afford one.

Bill also felt a little nettled wh S in neighborhood fashion gave him a lift row.

Then Mr. and Mrs. Bill Jones eared that they must have a car. Smithe could do it and get away w the Joneses? A flivver was co course, out of the question. Nobe their crowd had flivvers. So Bill beg collected callings. The car was wanted was a Dandy Six.

Investigation developed that the Dandy Six would cost $1,690 cash and $1,840 on time. The salesman, a young man, bought the car for the dealer.

Bill confessed to the salesman that cash was out of the question the salesman pointed out that there was only $187.50 difference between cash and time. The salesman and also pointed out that the dealer would in that way get the immediate use of the car and, "Just think of it, please! You and your wife will get out of this!"

"That's right," agreed Bill. "How I pay it off?"

"Well, this car that I am showing you," explained the salesman, "I have a cash payment on of $611 and I have only two twelve monthly payments of $61.10 each. I guess that will be easy for you of your standing in the community."

"Guess that will be all right," said Bill. "You mean this minute as I will have to take it over with the Mrs. first, and bring her in and let her have a look at the car. I'll see you in a few days. Yes, I'll see you in a few days."

It was rather big of the truth. It had been really talked over with the Mrs. In fact, it was the Mrs. who was most anxious to have the car, although she was not so much not long far behind. The truth of the matter was that Bill did not even have the $611 in cash on hand, but was required for the first down payment, nor could he feel that he could afford to make the monthly payments.

with any degree of certainty. They tainly would put a terrible crimp into money budgets, and they already were up nearly all of the income.

Let us examine briefly what Bill's financial condition was at this time. He lived in a comfortable home, had been married for two years, shortly after marriage, he bought his home with small cash payment and was now making payments in fairly good amounts. His money and his monthly mortgage rental payment. Upkeep and maintenance and his daily living expenses took more money out of his savings account. He maintained a small checking account at the local bank which rarely balance more than $300, and there was some money there at the time. He had cash for the first cash payment of $1000. Six.

So, instead of going home to tell Mrs. Jones, as he had stated, that the automobile salesmen, he went to walk into the building which housed the First National Bank of his town. He made his usual deposit. There they had met socially and financially. The president made it possible for Bill to buy his first bank stock. He was very proud. He laid his cards on the table and told the president of his desire to buy a car. He asked if the bank would finance the after earning Bill out, that you can't have no position to buy a car, and that it is impossible for you to finance this. So you get going, you start to get a car, and you say, 'When you are contracting to do is to get out of your present annual income $4,000 the sum of $1,857 during the year which is approximately what you have your entire income. But that is not what you have got to figure at least $4,000 more for operating and maintaining the car, repairs, gas and depreciation. Another $2,000 on your income, a sum of $2,400 in round figures more than your income. If you take on this now, you are going to keep on making payments on your car, and you won't pay your present hard-earned equity that is in stock? There are a lot of the things they did can't sleep nights, just because they did want to get out of the house. It is getting to be a question then which they are going to lose their car or their homes.'

"I don't see how you can go on looking very much worried," said B. "Of course, they wouldn't take it. I would try to share with them, and advertise and show it to the public."

The men wouldn't be so hard if you had the cash and were able to pay for it in installments, but as it is, it is not right, because then the worst of the troubles would be over. You could afford it if you had the money, but water, but the way you are fixed you would surely sink if you attempt to buy it."

"Well, you have convinced me," said Bill, "but I don't think that I can do the wife over. As it is, she and I are so sort of social outcasts, because we can't return the rides we get from Green and Smiths and Browns, and when we can't borrow a ride, we have to take a taxi, and what the neighbors

Bill Jones had the automobile urge! Bill Jones, and Green, all neighbors, had cars. Bill did not know if Green or Green could afford cars, but he knew that if they had, they were paid for, or they had a good reputation among their neighbors as that?

"I wish you could talk to the wife for me," said Bill.

"I will gladly. Send her around," said Bill.

When Bill got home he was greeted with the usual hug and squeeze and kiss, which always signified his home-coming, and this time he was extra kind and anxious to see his wife.

"What does he want to see me for?" asked Mrs. Bill.

"To prove to you that we can't afford a car," said Bill.

"And did you let that old fogey talk to you like that? I guess we can afford a car," said Mrs. Bill.

"I don't know where we are going to get the monthly installments from," said Bill.

"Yes!" exclaimed the president with deep sadness in his tone. "Yes! I'll tell you one thing more. I'll tell you what Brown and Green and Smith are saying about you. 'That Jones is sure some wise bird; they couldn't hang a car on him!'"

"No, I didn't get it," slowly answered Bill. "The down payment was too much for me. And I don't know where we are going to get the monthly installments from."

Practice of "Picking Up" Strangers
Proved by Records to Be Harmful

With the opening of fine pleasant weather the "sons of Baa," who have been "holed up" are again afoot on the highways of the nation, according to some of the "curry boys" who follow the practice of "picking up" strangers on the road.

These restless souls, made impatient by an enforced sojourn in one place for the months of the rains and cold, are now in the "curry boys' line" and are out to get. They are going north or south and some east or west. Few know whether they are going or how far. All that seems to interest them is a change of scenery, a new place to "hole up."

No matter what highway one travels nowadays there one will see numbers of these "birds of passage," trudging along the road going somewhere, any

Light, Heat, Power and Insurance

Perhaps, in view of the "Ask Me" craze now sweeping the country, this article might have been called "Long Should I Live?" Such any rate, was the startling title chosen by Bruce Barton when, recently, he addressed the National Electric Light Association. The present purpose is to suggest the answer.

Everybody, no doubt, at some time or other has pictured to himself the American homestead. He has watched in imagination, the woman of that household tolling her candlelight in her dwelling in the wilderness. He has glimpsed her bending over the open fire, preparing the meals, or on her bedside the brook doing her washing, perhaps sitting in the cabin doorway across her lap, her fingers playing thus came slowly came and went. But the passing of the years what had tiny settlements clinging precariously to a hostile soil grew into cities. The larger ones could even afford some small conveniences. Horse-carriage men seemed to wind through their cities on the streets. Homes began to be heated by coal stoves and the streets were lit by gas street lamps and the grocer brought the household—daughter, mother, wife, worked on as the partner still. He was the lot of her. He was the one who was in the improved way of the simple life in the modest comforts which she herself had helped to create.

Finally, with the approach of the twentieth century, the American era dawned. The American housewife has come to a measure of comfort as she has never dreamed of, perhaps, but surely she has thought to attain. Many are the ways for instance, to lighten her burden of labor. The smoky oil lamp has been replaced to clean gas light or to the incandescent electricity. She finds her home equipped with the help her almost everywhere.

Today, when night comes, the flicker of a finger on a wall button ignites floods the room with the equivalent of your consumption of candles, or—much less touched to a gas flare. For you turn a washing machine on a radiator to refrigerate, or to perform a hundred other domestic chores; it is only necessary to "plug in" a small electric sample heat to cook a meal, or to have a banquet!

So common, so universally accepted are all this, that it is hard to realize in what short period these things have come. In 1850 there was no electricity and little truly artificial gas. Today, as one has computed that electricity has been used in 60 years of time at a rate that manufactured gas 5,000 times does.

This means that Americans now work for their money by doing nothing, winning, performing faithfully

Naturally enough, two such mighty wants as gas and electricity need heavy investment and not a few dollars will do. "Just grow," they said. "Just grow." And of course, from the universal mother—Improvement, Necessity, and Father was Inventive Genius. But guardian is, and always will be, the American public. way systems. "Tidy sums there, vast sums there," says the speaker, "in a land which now harbors the flood of monetary evil, the most stupendous amassment of capital ever known."

Ultimately it came from but one source—the American public. In this country there is no longer a distinction between capital and labor. To prove that this distinction has been faced, not the least of which is the fact that there are thirty-six million direct investors in the industrial enterprises of the United States. Of these, one-seventh, are investors in public utilities. Out of the pockets of the people, therefore, have issued the funds needed to develop light, heat and power. It is the case of the people, not the banks.

But the people, and those who agents handle the people's money, whether they be insurance companies, banks and trust companies or other agencies, are not to be held responsible for their savings on unproductive investments. The people—and the case of institutions, the superpower under which they function—are to be blamed for the two features of the public utility business that they would entrust their money to. They had to satisfy themselves, first, to the basic character of the business.

continuity, its protection against the certain forces of disruption. The public utilities constitute an economic unit which has been self-existent since the beginning of time. First, while the public interest in America took it upon themselves to guarantee the continuous operation of business insofar as, by their kind of protection, they were kindred to it. Hence the people, convinced of the security as an investment and its loss from due to fire and other interests, have acted accordingly and built it up into a solid structure.

Stock fire insurance maintains inspection and engineering service exclusively for the public utility industry. It is peculiar problems that must be met. It is to keep the service always available—a twenty-four-hour service like that of the telephone and the roads. Reserve equipment must be ready at an instant's notice. No other hazardous business can so interfere with the industry's operation by forethought or by emergency trouble can be averted. If business is certainly, eternal vigilance is the price of popularity.

The risks which the management of public utilities must take if it is to build ahead of the demands of American business progress should be left to the individuals who have made a life study of

Dr. M. C. Stone of Wellsley, Mass., passed the week end with his brother, Frank P. Stone and family. Dr. Stone, Dr. Stone is in his eightieth year but enjoys travel, when not too deeply concerned over his flower garden. He came to Maine to visit his son in Westbrook and to attend the 82nd reunion of his class of 1865, during Bowdoin College Commencement, which is an annual event with him. Frank P. Stone, the Norway druggist, is 74 years old, but decidedly active. The brothers are the only survivors of a large family.

Book Printed in Norway, Century Ago

Eugene Andrews, dealer in antiques, has among many old and curious things, a book printed in Norway, a century ago. The volume was printed for Samuel Hutchinson by Axel Borge, printer in Norway, 1827, at the Oxford Bookstore. A rather long title reads thus: "An Apology for Believing in Universal Reconciliation, or an Appeal from the Inferior Court of Bigotry, Superstition, Ignorance and Unbelief, with a Key to Revelation". The contents is a protest against many Puritanical forms and teachings of the age.

The last few pages are devoted to advertising publications found in the Oxford Bookstore, on sale for cash or "trade".

Another curiosity is a wall chart of the Declaration of Independence and a good fac-simile of the original. A border comprising seals of the thirteen states is done in yellow, blue and red. Printed in New York, 30 Washington St., Boston, is the printer's signature. This came from an old house at Middle Intervale, Bethel; it has every mark of antiquity.

A crayon or India ink sketch of the old Willey House, executed by S. N. Kimball, in 1855 and mounted under glass is a rare print in his collection, hanging upon the walls of the room where many treasures may be found.

Maine And The Primary Law

Mrs. Althea C. Quimby

The Maine W. C. T. U. welcomed the direct primary law and has always endorsed it. We are opposed to its repeal. We recognize it as a method of nomination by which a greater number and a greater proportion of the electorate participate in choice of candidates than by any other method. The results of the direct primary have warranted the confidence of the people of Maine. We are not afraid to trust the people of Maine to re-submit the direct primary to the consistent stand has been that it is better to trust important matters, such as selection of candidates, to the direct vote of the people than to a caucus-chosen convention with its bossism, secret meetings, bargaining and its corruption.

Representative government calls for the direct election by the people of representatives who shall carry out the executive and governmental functions for them. Under the direct primary system the people directly nominate these representatives.

The nomination of the candidate directly by the people, however, makes the system no less representative. If it is not representative government, then to have what the caucus and convention porters would call representative government would require, not that we hold elections as we now do to elect our governors by vote of the people, but that we should choose by a convention of hand-picked delegates. This could hardly be defended as being more representative.

To be sure, some corrupting influences may work into the primary. The Corrupt Practice Act may be broken—but on how much larger scale would it be possible, and has it been done, in a convention, from which there is no legal road providing for exposure.

We are not considering the misdeeds which have arisen in other States regarding the primary law. Other States have their problems and we have ours. We are legislating for Maine. The ease of this law is very different in its re-rective force than would be the case were we considering, for instance, a law regarding the manufacture of intoxicants.

The weakness of such a law in New Hampshire or Massachusetts might seriously interfere with an otherwise successful law in Maine, but a successful primary law in Maine would in no way be affected by an undesirable law in Pennsylvania and New Hampshire.

The primary is the only method by which the voter may repudiate an unfaithful or unworthy public official without endorsing principles of a political party which might be objectionable to him. He may hereby still adhere to his party when he wishes to repudiate an objectionable official.

Women, especially Maine women, participate in the direct primary, but they would be small factors in political conventions. The women of Maine are of the conservative type; they would reluctantly and rarely enter as active factors into the caucus and convention system. However, they earnestly wish and should have an equal part in naming the candidates for whom they must vote. They find this opportunity in the direct primary and almost untold the women of Maine stand against its repeal.

Almost to a unit do the organized women of Maine endorse the direct primary and oppose a return to the caucus and convention system. There are a few exceptions, but they do not represent the rank and file of the women of Maine.

It is a curious fact that the plot against the primary began at exactly the time that women were given the right to vote. "This may not mean anything," said former Senator Albert J. Beveridge, "but it may explain much." It cannot be proved by positive evidence that one purpose of getting rid of the primary was to nullify the vote of the women, but that would be the practical result.

The women of Maine are much interested in this matter. They look upon the primary as a big factor in law enforcement. Law enforcement today is the biggest problem of the United States and of the government of any one sovereign State. Certainly Maine should not be guilty of doing anything that would weaken her powers in law enforcement or cause us to revert to former undesirable conditions.

Those Who Advertise

Usually the argument is made that every business concern should advertise. Generally speaking, this is true but there are exceptions. In fact, some concerns hardly dare to advertise because they cannot make good according to the requirements of modern business practices.

When advertising is misleading or untruthful it does more harm than good. Only an enterprise which fulfills the promises made in its advertising can stand the spotlight of publicity. Hence, when we find a store or other business establishment boldly advertising its wares or service month after month and year after year, we may generally conclude that it can and does give real values.

Observing the advertised business of any community, large or small, will enable one to identify the most dependable concerns in that community. Only efficient and reputable establishments dare to advertise.

Lesson for July 3

SAUL CHOSEN KING

LESSON TEXT—1 Samuel 16:17-25;
16:26-28.

GOLDEN TEXT—What doth Jehovah require of thee, but to do justly, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with thy God?

PRIMARY TOPIC—Saul Becomes a King.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-IC—Saul's Life Service.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC—Opportunities for Leadership.

The period of Judges ended with Samuel's administration. This lesson shows us the transition from the rule by the judges to the monarchy. For a comprehensive view of the transition, it will be well to make a survey of chapters eight to eleven.

1. The People Demand a King ($1-5).

(1) Their reasons for this demand.

(2) Samuel was incapacitated by old age; (3) the unfaithfulness of his sons whom he had appointed as his successors. In this Samuel committed a great blunder, for the office of judge was not hereditary. (3) The desire to be like other nations. The surrounding nations had a king as their leader. They wanted a king who would go out and fight their battles (v. 20).

2. Samuel's behavior under this trial (vv. 6-9). He took the matter to the Lord in prayer. Even though Samu-el's blunders in part brought on this trouble he did the wise thing in taking it to the Lord in prayer. The Lord comforted him by assuring him that this rejection was not merely his rejection, but the rejection of the kingship of God.

3. Samuel Tells of the Manner of the Kings (vv. 10-15).

He shows them that the king will be very exacting and arbitrary in his dealing with them.

4. He will take their sons and make them to serve in the army and do all kinds of hard work on his farm and in his house. He will make slaves of their daughters also.

5. He will take their lands, even those inherited from their fathers, and give them to his favorite officers and servants. Not content with that he will take the tenth part of the produce that remains and give to them.

6. Samuel's Protest Disregarded by the People (vv. 19-22).

Having made up their minds they deliberately shut their eyes to the truth and rushed madly into the experiment.

7. The King Provisionally Pointed Out (v. 10-15).

Saul was sent by his father to search for the asses that had wandered away. This was quite natural.
While Saul and his father were acting freely in this matter, at the same time God's sovereign purpose was being carried out. Although difficult to understand, God carries forth His sovereign purpose without interfering with man's freedom.

8. The King Chosen at Mizpah
(10:17-27).

The Lord had already pointed out to Samuel who should be king and Saul had been anointed. Let us observe:

1. Why Saul was chosen. If they would have a king the Lord would give them the one best suited to fill the place. He was from Benjamin, a small tribe, which would prevent undue rivalry between Ephraim and Judah, the leading tribes of Israel. He was also chosen because of his personal fitness (v. 23).

2. How Saul was chosen. The method was by lot. Samuel called them together before the Lord, and before the lot was cast he again remonstrated with them against such action. He showed them the base infirmity of their rejection of such a God and King who had done so much for them, and gave them a chance to forego their rash demand.

3. How the king was received by the people. Saul knew that the Lord had chosen him, but through modesty and fear he shrank from the responsibility. When he was brought forth Samuel presented him to the people, assuring them that Saul was the Lord's choice.

4. The King Confirmed at Gilgal
(ch. 11).

Some after the election at Mizpah
the Ammonites made a desperate demand upon the men of Jabesh-gilead.
Saul hearing of it hastily summoned the tribes together for war and won a remarkable victory. As he thus proved his ability the people wished to punish the sons of Belial, but Saul forbade them. Samuel took advantage of this auspicious situation and called all the people together at Gilgal where they formally crowned him their king.

The Life

To apprehend the life that is to be we must learn to think more largely and secretly of the life that is new.
We must enlarge the scope and meaning of today, must identify today with what we call eternity.—Charles Cut-bert Hall.

Moving Forward

To move forward in life, you do not need to be forward in conduct, but you must keep your face to the front, and see your objective.—The Golden.

John Carroll Poland, who died June 19, eighty years on May 6, last. He was born in 1847 in Lovell, the son of Calvin paternal ancestors settled in Boston and the adjacent country as early as 1635.

They were among those who fought in the Continental Army in the American

Poland's ancestry is traced from Governor Thomas Hinckley and from John Howland, a signer of the Mayflower Compact.

His boyhood and early manhood were passed in Maine and he later went to Lawrence, where his ability in woodworking led to his eventually becoming an inventor of machinery. After his first marriage and removal to Roxbury and later to Dorchester. He achieved considerable success in making laundry machinery,
largely representing his own inventions,
and his products are used throughout the country, especially in laundries, the larger hotels and in institutions.

this country to as far as California, also Canada. In his religious affiliations he was a member of the Methodist denomination.

Downie Bros. Wild Animal Circus Coming Here, July 9

Gone are the horses from the streets.
Gone are the old time ways and methods of yesterday. Going also are the obsolete Knox, recently.

Downie Bros. Wild Animal Circus has for the past two seasons transported his entire circus on a gigantic fleet of motor trucks. They will be seen here in their entirety one day only, Saturday, July 9, at the Fair Grounds between Norway and South
Paris.

In addition to the large menagerie and many trained animals including the herd of performing elephants, including "Tena," the smallest trained elephant in the world, there are Downie Bros. group of fighting jungle bred Africa lions put through their paces by Capt. Bob Johnson, one of America's most fearless animal trainers. Also a mixed group consisting of a lion, leopard, bear, goat, dog, and lamb, all performing in the massive steel arena. In this act the biblical story of Samson is illustrated as the gentle lamb lies down beside the large and ferocious lion. The brute creation that for time unreckonable have waged war dwell in happy harmony and proudly show the proficiency of their intelligence. Lions that ride horseback, tigers that leap through hoops of fire, cats, bears, camels and monkeys performing peacefully in one grand group.

One of the most unique and strange animal acts is Carl Clark's trained pigs.
Mr. Clark has a troupe of six Yorkshire zorbach hogs, known as the most stubborn animal. These "rooters" jump over hurdles, play leapfrog, roll barrels and shoot the darts. Mr. Clark has the only hog in the world that sits up and walks on his hind legs. There are also walks on his hind legs. There are also forming bears, sheldand ponies, pair riding dogs and monkeys, funny balloons and in fact a veritable Noah's Ark of strange and curious animals.

In addition to the animal acts Downie Bros. have this season a high class circus performance including Gene and Mary Foss, who do a sensational act while aloft of a 35 foot pole. Also Harry and Charlotte Levine in head and hand balancing and a fast double trapeze act.
Taylor and Moore, aerial artists, William Grant, the frog man, Shalile Duly, an acrobatic comedian, doing a fall from the top of five tables. The Rojas Duo, with Mary Rojas, the lady with the iron jaws and feats of dental dexterity. The John Walters Trio, artists on the Roman rings.

The American Concert Band of sixteen musicians, headed by William Allison, will play the latest jazz music as well as standard music.

One of the features of Downie Bros.
Circus will be the mile long street parade at noon. The most novel street parade in the world. Not a horse drawn vehicle in the parade. All motorized. Two performances a day at 2:40 P. M. and 8 P.
M. Doors open one hour earlier.

Supreme Court Decision Protects Forests

The supreme court of the United States has decided that carelessness with fire need not be confined to federal forest lands in order to constitute a criminal offense under the United States criminal code.

This decision was in the case of the United States vs. D. J. Alford, and of far-reaching importance in the protection of national forests. The decision holds that a criminal offense to leave a fire near a federal forest without totally extinguishing it.

Under section 53 of the United States criminal code, the offense is punishable by fine or imprisonment if national forest timber is endangered.

The defense held that the federal statute did not cover leaving a fire at any place except on government land.

In handing down the opinion of the supreme court, Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes said: "The purpose of the act is to prevent forest fires which have been one of the great economic misfortunes of the country. The danger depends upon the carelessness of the fire; not upon the ownership of the land where it is kindled."

"The statute is constitutional. Congress may prohibit the doing of acts upon privately owned lands that imperil the public interest in the forest."

Taken in connection with the danger to be prevented, it lays down a plain enough rule of conduct for anyone who seeks to obey the law.

The decision is especially important to national forest protection, according to Supervisor Ira T. Yarnall for their thousands of miles of boundary are subject to the grave danger of fire.
